2019-2020 Reflection

Article by: Allison Petek

Salvete Omnes!

As another year of Miramonte Latin comes to an end—this time in unusual circumstances—I hope everyone can celebrate their experiences and achievements with Miramonte Latin Club!

This year in Latin was one for the books! We kicked off the school year with our annual pasta feed, where students had a chance to connect with their Latin Buddies and enjoy some delicious food. Later in the month, Latin 1's experienced Augustus' Birthday celebrations for the first time, a cherished Miramonte Latin tradition.

In November, students had the opportunity to attend Ludi Novembres, a Northern California convention hosted by the California Junior Classical League (CAJCL). Students spent the day taking academic tests, competing in sporting events, mingling with other young Latin scholars, creating artwork, and cheering excitedly for Miramonte during general assemblies.

During the holiday season, students went caroling in downtown Orinda to share Miramonte Latin Club's joyful spirit with the community. The club also hosted its annual Saturnalia festival, featuring wonderful treats, gambling, holiday card making, and bird auguries!

On Leap Day this year, the club took on the daunting task of spring cleaning by hosting a Latin Club Shed Cleanout Party. Students enjoyed a fun day of digging through old Latin club treasures and riding around on the chariots and Trojan Horse.

Under the leadership of Caesar Athena Davis, the club's dedicated officers worked hard at the weekly Wednesday meetings to create a positive, fun community on campus.

Sadly, due to COVID-19, this year's CAJCL State Convention was canceled, and Miramonte Latin Club did not have the opportunity to achieve victory for the 8th year in a row! During the pandemic, Miramonte Latin Club has stayed strong and remained active with lively Zoom meetings featuring games of Kahoot and Quiplash. I am so proud of the resilience the Latin club has demonstrated over these past months, and am excited for our future endeavors.

I look forward to many more excellent years of classical study!

What To Do During Quarantine

Spread and Photos by: Nejla Ackdoe-Pagey

We asked the Latin I's what they're doing to avoid boredom during the shelter-in-place order!

"I've been absolutely demolishing my pantry, going on socially-distanced hikes with friends, and failing miserably trying to learn how to juggle a soccer ball."

- Megan Chui

"During quarantine, I've been keeping busy by picking up new hobbies such as painting, baking, and cooking dinner for my family. I've also spent lots of time going on walks and hikes with my family."

- Courtney Mercer

"Although being quarantined isn't an ideal way of starting summer, I have found many ways to keep myself active. Some things that I have enjoyed doing are going on walks, bike rides, and playing a lot of 'Just Dance.'"

- Ellie Belshaw

"I've been playing lots of tennis and walking my dog."

- Marina Kim

"I've been staying at home and doing lots of Duolingo for Latin class. I've also been playing video games,"

- Addison Owensby

"I've just been playing a lot of video games,"

- Thomas Wilson

Senior Advice

As the 2019-2020 comes to a close, the Consul is dedicating this issue to the Senior Class. These Latin students worked so hard for their 4 years at Miramonte, and their dedication to the Classics inspired the underclassmen in the JCL. Here is some advice that they have for the MHS Latin community, messages to their fellow senior classmates, and their favorite memories:

“A favorite memory I have from Latin is celebrating Emperor Augustus’s birthday every year and being in a skit so bad it’s good.” - Miriam Michels

“My favorite Latin memory is Ludi my freshman year! It was fun to have my first JCL event at Miramonte. I’ll always remember playing volleyball, partaking in the scavenger hunt, and listening to Magistra’s workshop. I met some of my closest friends that day too!” - Isabelle Krochmal

“My advice to future Latin students would be to get involved with Latin and to try and have as much fun as possible while doing it.” - Billy Beltran

“Y’all should do stuff in Latin Club. It’s pretty cool.” - Seamus McCarthy

“Though we obviously didn’t get to go to the state convention this year, i am glad that i was able to practice our spirit chants at Ludi with some of my best friends, Billy, Oscar, Freddie, and Darren”
- Matthew O’Brien

“Latin has been one of the most rewarding parts of my high school experience. Spending time with everyone has been a blast. Shoutout to Isabelle for being the best friend and secretary ever, and the Miramonte squad at Nationals, y’all are the definition of JCLove!” - Athena Davis

GRATIAS VOBIS AGO FOR BRINGING GLORY TO MHS LATIN.
WE MISS YOU ALREADY, SENIORS!

Thank You Magister and Magistra!

We are so incredibly grateful for our amazing teachers, Magister Davis and Magistra Mullowney. Their love for the language, passion for teaching, and care for their students creates an enriching learning environment and welcoming community on campus. Thank you, Magister and Magistra, for all of the hard work and care you put inside and outside of the classroom, to make Miramonte Latin the special and unparalleled program it is!

A Letter From The Editors

Salvete Omnes!

We are so honored and thankful that we got this special opportunity to produce The Consul this past year. We have greatly enjoyed working with each other and the other officers to capture the special charm and glory of Miramonte Latin Club in this publication. Thank you to everyone who contributed to The Consul this year! Whether it was meaningful articles, joyful pictures, or thoughtful quotes, these additions made the publication a true reflection of the Latin community. We are so thankful for the Educational Foundation of Orinda and Miramonte High School for the amazing support and resources they provide for Miramonte Latin Club. We are so excited to welcome the two newest Consul Editors, Grace Liu and Malayna Chang, and we can't wait to work more with them next year.

Sincerely,
Chaya Tong, Allison Petek, Sophia Govea, and Nejla Ackdoe-Pagey

Wise Words From Athena Davis

Dear Miramonte Latin Club,

What a year! I am so proud of each and every one of you. Whether you are a Latin Club officer or a new member of the program, you all have contributed something to our community in your own way, be it helping your peers translate or bringing food to the pasta feed. Seeing all of you cheer together at Ludi was so inspiring - I'm glad we got that moment of unity as a club. I wish we all could have gone to the State Convention together - our officers had been working so hard to set us up for an eight-peat victory. However, their efforts weren't in vain: y'all are gonna be so over prepared for next year! So hold onto your art, study up for tests, and hone your dodgeball skills, the future is bright for MHS JCL! I will miss our Wednesday lunches together, our shed cleanout parties, the endless laughter. I will miss Ludi and State and Nationals. I will miss my translation buddies of 4+ years. Latin club is in great hands, with 24 officers who are ready to continue the traditions of community and excellence that we all strive for. Let the end of this year serve as an inspiration rather than a discouragement - we still have been able to connect during this crisis - having club meetings, officer meetings, and even an election! Being able to thrive as a club during these uncertain times is truly a testament to all of your strength and dedication as individuals. I am eternally grateful for the connection, growth, and joy Latin Club has brought to me and so many others. You have all built this monument, don't forget to step back and appreciate it once in a while.

Maximas Gratias,
Athena Davis

Miramonte Certamen News

Even the pandemic couldn't stop Miramonte's Certamen team! In light of quarantine, the game took a new form... over discord!!!

Carter, the state qualifying match, was cancelled this year. However, the certamen mini-league gave students an opportunity to compete (shoutout to Cara for finding the competition!!!). Players buzzed in using the chat window, and questions were asked over the voice chat.

"I think on discord it feels different because I can't see everybody's faces," Edrick Wang, who competed on the Latin III team, said.

The new certamen platform also allowed Miramonte players to interact with other players on a national level, unlike Carter which is state-wide. The questions were challenging, and players got a taste of talent from around the country.

"Everyone was so knowledgeable about every part of Latin, whether it be complex grammar concepts, obscure historical facts, or the life stories of mythological characters I had never even heard of before. I was blown away by the amount of skill that I have been able to compete against so far," Wyatt Barnes, who competed on the Latin II team, said.

In the face of the COVID-19 pandemic that is circulating around the globe, it is easy for us to look at the rising death tolls and hospitalization rates and feel a sense of despair – but it is also important to remember that this pandemic is not the first (nor will it be the last) to rock the world. Earth is a spectacularly dirty place, after all. We have made it through worse, and we will do it again. So, in honor of the fighting spirit, here is a list of some ancient deadly plagues that we have survived and lived to tell the tale.

Antonine Plague

The Antonine Plague erupted in 165 CE during, as one might have guessed, the reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. If you were so unlucky as to contract it, you could expect to experience fever, diarrhea, vomiting, and a slew of other unsavory symptoms that have led epidemiologists to believe the disease the Romans were contracting was smallpox. Whatever it was, it is estimated that close to a quarter or a third of the empire died as a result – that's 60 to 70 million people total – causing some to believe it played a major role in the decline of the Roman Empire.

Bubonic Plague

The bubonic plague was first documented – caused by a bacteria called Yersinia pestis – in the Bible's Book of Solomon, from approximately 1000 B.C.E, and has since devoted much of its time to terrorizing the ancient and medieval worlds. It was the culprit behind the Justinian Plague in the 500s and, infamously, the Black Death that ravaged Europe in the 14-century. In fact, the plague was so deadly that some medieval militaries began to use it as a form of primitive biological warfare. During a siege of the Genoese seaport Caffa, Tartarian forces that were afflicted with the plague began to fling their deceased over the walls of the heavily-fortified city; they hoped to win by starting an outbreak.

The Cocoliztli Epidemic

Aptly named the “cocoliztli” – Nahuatl for pestilence – by the Aztecs it afflicted, this disease swept through towns and left its victims dead within days. The afflicted experienced jaundice and bled from their orifices. They hallucinated and had terrible convulsions. Until recently, epidemiologists were unsure what the Aztec people had contracted in the 16th century, but recent DNA evidence has suggested the culprit is Salmonella enterica. This conclusion was reached by molecular paleobiologist Kirsten Bos, who found remnants of the bacteria in the teeth of 10 skeletons dating back to the outbreak of the epidemic. However, many scientists doubt that salmonella alone could have killed so many of the Aztecs – after all, heavy bleeding isn't consistent with the symptoms caused by the bacteria.

"Hi everyone! Even though we haven't been able to meet in person these past two months, thanks for staying supportive and making it such a fun year in Latin Club! I'm really looking forward to being a Consul next fall. Regardless of whether school is in person or online, Xander and I are committed to continuing our club traditions in whatever way we can and ensuring that the legacy of Miramonte Latin lives on!" - Cara, Co-Consul

"Hello and thank you for reading this! I suppose these are my first official words as a Consul of Latin club. Throughout quarantine, we've been one of the only clubs that was left standing. No matter how much effort officers put in, that's only possible if everyone in the club comes together to support it. So... thank you for making that possible. Cara and I promise that no matter what happens, we'll give you reasons to keep coming back for more." - Xander, Co-Consul

Senior Shout Out

Dear MHS Community and the graduating class of 2020,

It is the usual tradition that we honor our graduating seniors who have taken AP Latin with us at our annual end of year Latin banquet by bestowing upon them a name from the ancient Mediterranean world that best fits their character and actions as a Latin student, and as part of the wider Miramonte community. As we could not hold our banquet in person this year, we would like to give praise to each one of our seniors in print. Gaudeamus igitur! Ite Mats!

– Magister Davis and Magistra Mullowney

Ashley Abramson: Boudicca, queen of the Iceni in Britannia, a strong fighter for her people, so Ashley is also a steadfast rock to her friends and family, a champion rower, and consistent competitor who attacked all of her Latin assignments with a fluid sense of humor the way Boudicca could drive a war chariot.

Daryan Behtash: Martial, Roman author from Hispania famous for his epigrams, a mover and shaker in the world of imperial Rome, who writes with comic realism about his friends and key historical events, so is Daryan ever capable in class to contribute an amusing comment buzzing among his friends, or a thought-provoking question of his Latin teacher about ancient history.

Freddie Bell: Pliny the Younger, the second-century CE Roman known for his prestigious career in the senate as well as his skills as a writer. Pliny's published letters contain a vast repository of knowledge concerning all sorts of topics of Roman life and rule, so Freddie has made a prestigious career as a committed Latin student who could always offer an interesting angle of analysis on the interpretation of passages and Roman history.

Billy Beltran: Antoninus Pius, Roman emperor who succeeded Hadrian, known for his steady imperial rule and tranquil family life, so Billy has always maintained a calm and confident demeanor as a Latin student that his fellow students working with him in a translation group, and his instructors admire and appreciate.

Kenya Bertoli: Diana, goddess divine of wild nature as well as the hunt, ever caring for and protective of the wild spaces, so Kenya delights in nature, and sharing the experiences of the natural world with her friends and family.

Matthew Carrington: Marcus Aurelius, the Roman philosopher-emperor of the second-century CE whose personal writings, known later as Meditations, became widely influential across the centuries for its eloquent observations on the transitory nature of life and making the correct moral choices, so Matthew has been ever the sage in our Latin classroom, a talented student, and artist, a wise leader in the making.

Natasha Cohen: Cumaean Sibyl, the oracle who leads Aeneas on his journey to the Underworld, so Tasha is a wise seer, ever seeing with her quiet powers of observation the finer details that lesser mortals miss or dismiss in the finer details of Latin textual analysis, semantics, and vocabulary.

Abigail Crinks: Dido, queen of the Carthaginians who builds a city to rival Rome, so to Abigail carved out an impressive niche for herself as an AP language student of both Latin and Spanish simultaneously this year.

Athena Davis: Athena, goddess of wisdom and righteous warfare, so aptly named (did your parents receive an omen at your birth to signify how appropriate the “onoma” would be?), a champion officer of the JCL and NJCL, a fighter for social justice, and a tireless friend and Latin scholar.

Joe Henderson: Ajax the Greater, son of Telamon, the most able fighter of the Greeks after Achilles, he exchanges armor with Hector, manages to protect the Greek wall and their ships, so has Joe steadfastly pursued his studies as a Latin student as well as proven himself an Eagle Scout.

Oscar Hodder: Julius Caesar, like the most famous Roman himself, Oscar is a student who possesses such energy and confidence, it makes watching him attack any Latin passage unforgettable, Oscar encourages his classmates like the Roman soldier in the text of Caesar’s de Bello Gallico 4.25, “Desilite commilitones, nisi vultis aquilam hostibus prodere; ego certe meum rei publicae atque imperatori officium praestitero.”

Campbell Hoskins: Aeneas, ever duty bound and mindful of his pietas on his odyssey from Troy to Latium, so Campbell is such an honorable young man on a lifelong journey filled with such thoughtfulness for others, for himself humility with grace, and he demonstrates a heartfelt dedication to all that he undertakes.

Isabelle Krochmal: Egeria, the wise female nymph and advisor to Numa Pompilius, second king of Rome who counsels him on legal matters, just so Isabelle with her strong moral compass possesses the same wise counsel, wise beyond her years.

Logan Krumholz: Chiron, centaur and tutor to gods and heroes, so Logan has distinguished himself this year by being an outstanding MHS peer tutor and role model to our younger Latin students as well as a fine student of AP Latin who is always observing the lessons with Chiron’s eyes.

Julia Lima: Cleopatra, most powerful Hellenistic ruler, either male or female, of the first-century CE eastern Mediterranean, highly educated, fluent in many languages, she bridged worlds, so Julia represents all that is positive and helpful with cross-cultural knowledge and understanding, a leader for our times.

Catherine Liu: Penthesilea, queen of the Amazons, who fought bravely in the Trojan War against Achilles, so Catherine has been a fierce contender in AP Latin this year doing a stellar job with both the Vergil and the Caesar, as well as excelling in all her other academic classes, and extracurricular pursuits.

Seamus McCarthy: Tacitus, the ancient historian, recounted the early years of the Roman empire with compact psychological prose. Like Tacitus, Seamus has impressed us all with insights and a love of academics and history. As dux optimissimi he has led the Latin Community as the leader of academics and certamen.

Miriam Michels: Hypatia, a renowned female scholar of the 4th c. CE in Alexandria, Egypt, known to be an outstanding mathematician, astronomer, and Neoplatonist philosopher, and also Aspasia, consort to the famous Greek statesman, Pericles, known for her charm and her intellect, so Miriam has been an extraordinary student of Latin and classical culture embracing all there is to learn with such enthusiasm and unrivaled pleasure. Οὕτοι! She will be missed!

Matthew O'Brien: Lucius Caecilius Metellus, consul in 251 BCE, who fought against the Carthaginians in Sicily and won a great victory at Panormus where he became famous for capturing many elephants, thus leading to his powerful Caecilii Metelli clan minting coins depicting an elephant, such a tale is worthy of the exploits of Matthew, ever ready with his wit and a fine student who always perseveres.

Marcus O'Neill: Agrippa, Emperor Augustus's right-hand man, loyal friend, and stalwart military advisor, just so Marcus is the consistently loyal student of Latin, never flagging, never failing in his skills or interest, perhaps this future engineer will double-major or minor in Classics for the sheer love of it.

Jackson Painter: Scipio Africanus, the great Roman general who triumphed over the Carthaginians, ever the courageous doer who called his own shots, Jackson likewise puts a high prize on his free will, and is also an honorable and courageous leader who is going places, and will win glory and fame for himself, and all who are in his sphere.

Owen Pan: Plutarch and Petrarch, the Greek historian of the later Roman empire as well as the fourteenth-century Italian Renaissance humanist with a passion for Latin manuscripts, a student who has so much positive history with MHS Latin, and a true Renaissance man who has regaled us with his performances on the piano, and shown off his stuff in Latin with his outstanding skills of vocabulary, grammar, literary style, as well as always being an avid participant in Latin convention.

Amrita Pannu: Cornelia, daughter of Scipio Africanus, wife and mother to the Gracchi, a woman renowned in Rome for her literary salons, moral virtues, and dedication to education--just as how she proclaimed her sons were her true jewels, so Amrita values her friends as highly prized gems as well as possessing outstanding academic capabilities, and moral sensibilities.

Tatiana Pechnikova: Sappho, the highly admired female poet of ancient Greece, whose poetry deals with human emotions, particularly love and loss, now much admired through the ages, so Tatiana shares her life experiences with those of us fortunate enough to have had her as a student, and will go on to be an inspiration to us all.

Audrey Spindler: Marcus Tullius Cicero, the famous Roman orator and statesman, so skilled in the power of words, so is Audrey as one of the staff writers of the Mirador and with her thoughtful and wise translations as demonstrated in AP Latin this year.

Bianca Tung: Octavia, Augustus's sister, ever loyal to her family, Octavia even does right by Cleopatra's children by raising them and providing them with a fine education in Rome, so to Bianca has demonstrated an outstanding commitment to the study of Latin, particularly in this AP year, and been an ever faithful and loyal friend.

Lucy Wang: Pales, goddess of shepherds whose festival in spring became conflated with the great celebrations of Rome's birthday itself, so Lucy is ever an entertaining intellectual presence in class, supportive of her flock of friends, and has contributed so much to the festive mood of MHS Latin not least with her wonderful T-shirt designs for Latin Club.

Nicholas Wong: Vergil, author of the greatest epic in Roman literature, the Aeneid, which regales its readers in dactylic hexameter using a myriad of literary devices in Latin with the tale of Aeneas, so this title is apt for Nicholas, a student whose knowledge and retention of Latin words is wonderful to relate (mirabile dictu).

Vasili Zigenis: Archimedes, the clever inventor and natural philosopher of Greek Syracuse, who dazzled Magna Graecia with his inventions, you have dazzled your instructors with your hands-on creativity (e.g., the full-scale replica of nineteenth-century military technology he made in US History), and been an ever helpful trouble-shooter as the AP Latin aid this year.
